Equity Pioneers Order Form

This book represents an attempt to capture the history of the sex equity coordinators (SECs) as they implemented the mandates of Perkins I and II, the federal laws funding vocational education from 1976 until 1998. The first position to be required by federal legislation, the SECs began with nothing more than a vague directive to “fix” sex discrimination and sex bias in vocational education. They were determined, courageous, innovative, assertive, and ultimately successful. The Sex Equity Coordinators changed the face of vocational education and made it a welcoming arena for all.
