

Robin Runge is a senior policy advisor in the Civil Rights Center at the U.S. Department of Labor where she serves as principal advisor on civil rights issues for the Director. In this capacity, she provides technical assistance to various stakeholders on civil rights issues related to Section 188 of the Workforce Investment Act of 1998 (and more recently WIOA), Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Age Discrimination Act of 1975, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1973 and Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act, as amended as they relate to the workforce development system. She drafts regulations, guidance documents, and other policy documents in collaboration with representatives of other DOL agencies and Federal departments to ensure compliance with civil rights responsibilities.

Robin is also an Associate Professorial Lecturer in Law at The George Washington University Law School where she has taught Public Interest Lawyering and Domestic Violence Law since 2004, including in the clinical education program. From 2009-2013, She was an assistant professor at the University of North Dakota School of Law where she taught in the Housing and Employment Law Clinic and Domestic Violence Law. In 2012-2013, she lived in Beijing, China as a Fulbright Senior Research Scholar studying the legal system response to domestic violence in China. Previously, she was Deputy Director and Coordinator of the Program on Women's Employment Rights (POWER) at the D.C. Employment Justice Center. Upon graduation from law school, Robin was awarded an Equal Justice Works Fellowship and created the Domestic Violence and Employment Project at the Legal Aid Society of San Francisco, one of the first programs in the country devoted exclusively to advocating for the employment rights of domestic violence victims. She is a graduate of The George Washington University Law School and Wellesley College.